Milestone

Incirlik promotes 62 to tech, 48 to master from base, GSUs

RANDOLPHAIR FORCE BASE, Texas —

Air Force officials selected 6,217 of 23,956 eligible technical sergeants for promotion to master sergeant, a 25.95-percent selection rate; and 9,114 of 42,248 eligible staff sergeants for promotion to technical sergeant, a 21.57-percent selection rate.

Incirlik and its geographically separated units fared well, promoting 62 of its people to technical sergeant and 48 to master sergeant.

"Incirlik was at the Air Force average for technical sergeant and above average for master sergeant at over 31 percent," said Col. Michael Gardiner, 39th Air Base Wing commander. "Congratulations to all of our selectees! This is a huge accomplishment and a milestone in any Airman's career."

The master sergeant selection rate rose .39 percentage points from last year, while this year's technical sergeant rate dropped .32 percentage points from last year.

The complete list of selectees will be posted to the Air Force Personnel Center's Web page at www.afpc.randolph.af.mil/eprom/ by 6 p.m. Central Standard Time today.

People who tested are expected to receive their score notices in early July. Each individual can also get an electronic copy of his or her score notice Monday by logging into the virtual military personnel flight at www.afpc.randolph.af.mil/.

The average master sergeant selectee score for the 04E7 master sergeant test cycle was 340.73 points, based on the following:

- 134.33 points for enlisted performance reports
 - 64.01 points for promotion fitness exam
 - 64.86 points for specialty knowledge test
 - —28.30 points for time in grade
 - —36.10 points for time in service
 - —21.21 points for decorations

The average master sergeant selectee has 3.64 years time in grade and 17.22 years in service. Those selected will be promoted to master sergeant August to July 2005.

The average selectee score for the 04E6 technical sergeant test cycle was 317.55 points, based on the following:

- 133.02 points for enlisted performance reports
 - 62.35 points for promotion fitness exam
 - 55.66 points for specialty knowledge test
 - -33.72 points for time in grade

AFN wins bragging rights for best local TV newscast

By Tech. Sgt. Melissa Phillips 39th Air Base Wing Public Affairs

Staff Sgt. Harry Kibbe chalks up winning a Department of Defense award to a job hazard that makes many military members cringe – inexperience.

The five-man crew was recently awarded the prestigious title of 2003 Thomas Jefferson award for best Local Television Newscast, Incirlik Nightly News at the Department of Defense level.

"Most of the broadcasters here are on their first tour as broadcasters," said Sergeant Kibbe, American Forces Network-Incirlik Incirlik Nightly News news director. "I think that gave us an advantage.

"We were able to see things and try things that other detachments may shy away from because they were afraid to step away from the norm. We weren't familiar with the norm, so we weren't confined to that box," said Sergeant Kibbe, who retrained from precision measurement equipment laboratory career field just a little over one year ago.

The crew competed against broadcasters from other military services to win the prominent award.

Although they don't typically report from the front lines of combat or a ship on the edge of war torn countries like their peers in other services, standing in front of a camera or microphone isn't always as easy as they make it look.

"We work a lot harder than people may think," said Sergeant Kibbe. "It's rare that we work a regular eight-hour day. It is nice to know that all of the time that we put into making it an excellent product is noticed."

Sergeant Kibbe believes his teammates attention to detail to even the tiniest elements of the newscast is the real reason for the win.

"I believe elements like our weather update separated us from the others," Sergeant Kibbe said. "Staff Sgt. Joe Belon (AFN-I broadcaster producer) came up with the whole concept and created a 30-second piece that airs every day."

As a military version of the local nightly hometown news, the AFN crew takes pride in informing the Incirlik community about base happenings.

"We take our job very seriously, but also have fun doing it," Sergeant Kibbe said. "The most challenging part of the job is choosing which events we can cover and which ones we can't. The most rewarding part of the job is when someone gives us feedback - good or bad - because it lets us know what we do is watched."

A funnel for command information, AFN broadcasters are happy to be teleported into the base members' lives twice a day to communicate and educate the base populace on the priorities and instructions of one man who can't be everywhere at once.

"The Thomas Jefferson Award is proof the Airmen at AFN-Incirlik provide the wing commander with the best warfighting communica-

728th AMS adds passenger arrival gate, conveyor system

By 1st Lt. Elizabeth Culbertson 39th Maintenance Group

Long lines and crowds often prove a source of frustration for weary travelers, anxious to reach their final destination. For people en route home or to a new duty station, standing around in a packed terminal adds to an already stressful situation.

The 728th Air Mobility Squadron is trying to create a better environment for its passengers with the completion of a new passenger arrival gate.

The Air Mobility Command-funded arrival gate cost about $400,000 and should be open for business next month. The project, begun in May 2003, will dramatically improve processing of both arriving and departing passengers, said Master Sgt. Lisa Hill, 728th AMS passenger terminal superintendent.

The new facility will not only allow smoother movement of people through two separate processing areas, but will have separate rooms for customs personnel.

"This is so passengers getting off an aircraft can process directly through passport, visa and customs officials," said Sergeant Hill.

"It should improve the efficiency of passengers getting stamped into the country."

Another major improvement is the addition of a baggage conveyor system similar to those seen in commercial airports, which Sergeant Hill said will alleviate lining up and stacking bags outside the main terminal.

Prior to its opening, 728 AMS passenger agents will go through all operating procedures — from walking passengers in through customs and baggage claim — to ensure a seamless transition.

The squadron has monitored the project closely over the past year to "make sure the end product will be as functional as it was predicted in the design phase," Sergeant Hill said. "It is going to be a great addition to the passenger reception process for personnel arriving here at Incirlik."

Personnel picking up arriving passengers will not be permitted to enter the new arrival gate area. They will be required to wait outside to maintain a sterile area for baggage claim.

For more information, call Sergeant Hill at 6-6001.

Change of command

Maj. Michael Platt assumes command of the 39th Services Squadron from Lt. Col. Jeffery Linskens Tuesday at 2 p.m at the club complex ballroom. For more information, call 1st Lt. Coleen Foust, 39th Services Squadron combat support flight commander, at 6-3108.

6-Ride volunteers

The 39th Air Base Wing Safety Office seeks volunteers for the 6-Ride program. Volunteers do not have to be on call, but may be called at any time to drive someone home. Ranks and gender are required so drivers can be matched with callers of equal rank and gender. For more information, call the safety office at 6-7233.

Finance briefings

The 39th Comptroller Flight Financial Services Office conducts in-processing briefings Thursdays at 3 p.m. in the finance conference room (Building 480) to facilitate newcomers with their financial needs and avoid delays while waiting for a scheduled newcomers briefing at the family support center. For more information, call Tech. Sgt. Daryl Moncrief, 39th CPTF customer service chief, at 6-6306.

Travel advisories

U.S. government employees can now travel directly to north (Turkish) Cyprus. All official travel requires country clearance from Embassy Nicosia. Travelers to and in north Cyprus must have tourist passports and cannot cross the United Nations-patrolled "green line" into south Cyprus. People are required to obtain their commander's approval for any travel outside of Adana. For more information, go to the Consular Information sheet at http://travel.state.gov, consult the latest battle staff directive on the Source or call the wing Antiterrorism and Force Protection Office at 6-6657.

Summer Hires still needed

The 39th Mission Support Squadron Civilian Personnel Office will accept applications through Wednesday to fill a limited number of laborer positions. Application packages are available and can be turned into CPO from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. For more information, call Joe Greene, CPO affirmative employment and employee relations chief, at 6-3067.

By Staff Sgt. Elaine Aviles 39th Air Base Wing Public Affairs

As a Pittsburgh Steelers wide receiver, Hines Ward is accustomed to whipping past the opposition and scoring touchdowns on the football field. But during a visit to Incirlik Air Base Thursday, Mr. Ward scored big points, not with his team, but with base people.

People turned out in droves to meet Mr. Ward, who spent a day autographing photos and visiting base facilities as part of the U.S. Air Forces in Europe Extreme Summer tour.

"Every year we try to find celebrities and sports figures to visit USAFE bases as a morale booster and to encourage support of the Extreme Summer program," said Mandy Smith-Nethercott, USAFE Services marketing and entertainment chief.

"We were very lucky to get Hines Ward. He's a well known sports figure with an exemplary reputation and a commitment to community service."

Fans of all ages, including die-hard Steelers fans, showed up for Ward's appearances at the youth center, base exchange and pool.

"I live about an hour away from Pittsburgh and love the Steelers," said Susan Perkins, who stopped by the youth center for an autograph with her 14-month-old daughter Mattie. Both were in full Steelers regalia. "I've been a fan for years."

Mr. Ward also stopped by the community activity center, where he dared people to take on the Steelers during a PlayStation Madden 2004 football challenge. During the tournament, Mr. Ward experienced something he rarely does on the football field – a thrashing.

"I beat him 42-7 but he took it like a trooper," said Senior Airman

Tyrell Schoolfield, 39th Medical Squadron pharmacy services technician.

"Overall he did really well, and almost made it to the finals," said Narissa Atkisson, community center program specialist. "He had a blast. Even when he lost he took it gracefully and said he wanted his competitor to 'get the bragging rights.""

Whether a fan or not, base people appreciated the visit.

"I'm a Packers fan but I wanted to meet Hines Ward anyway," said Senior Airman Brandon Layman, 39th Security Forces Squadron Pass and Registration Office clerk. "I think it's great that he traveled here to show support for the troops."

Mr. Ward said he was eager for the opportunity.

"When I was asked to participate, I didn't hesitate to say yes," he said. "I saw it as an opportunity to show the troops how appreciative everyone back home is for their service. I figured what better way to do that then to meet them up close and personal."

Mr. Ward said he hoped his visit helped boost morale and "uplift everyone."

"I wanted to encourage the kids here, who might get down and wonder if they can pursue their athletic dreams from overseas," he said. "I wasn't in the military but I was raised in a single-parent home and we struggled. I overcame adversities to achieve my dreams and kids here can do the same. Positive things happen to positive people."

Mr. Ward said he's walking away from the experience with a deeper appreciation for the military.

"I hope my visit here showed military people and the families that support them how thankful Americans are for what they do," he said. "You provide us freedom. Coming here is the least I can do."

COMMANDER'S COMMENTS

By Col. Michael Gardiner, 39th Air Base Wing commander

With a fun-filled summer ahead, the unit compliance inspection in October may seem far off. Don't believe it! Now's the time to start preparing your work center. Don't wait until the last two weeks before the inspection and expect good results for your unit and the base. Trust me, the inspector general knows when the ink is still wet. So if you need to test processes, buy new equipment, comply with regulations - start now! Preparation is the key to success.

Master and tech selects

Congratulations to Incirlik's master and technical sergeant selects. This is a huge accomplishment and a milestone in any Airman's career. Incirlik was at the Air Force average for technical sergeant and above average for master sergeant at over 31 percent. (For a list of promotees, see Page 3)

SNCOA graduate

Congratulations to Senior Master Sgt. Jerry Moore, 39th Security Forces Squadron, who recently graduated from the U.S. Air Force Senior NCO Academy class 04-D at the Maxwell-Gunter Air Force Base, Ala.

Kudos

Congratulations to the following individuals who were distinguished graduates from recent Customer College classes: Staff Sgt. Hector Contreras, 39th Operations Squadron, and Staff Sgt. Craig Brodber, 39th Mission Support Squadron.

Report accidents

Accidents are a fact of life, but too many people operate under the premise, "what are the odds of that occurring, it will never happen to me." If you are involved in an accident outside the gate, remember: don't move your vehicle, and immediately call 39th Security Forces Squadron Law Enforcement Desk at 6-3200. They have translators who can speak to on-scene response personnel and can help you get through an accident without violating any Turkish laws. Here are a few other emergency numbers to remember: 154 to report traffic accidents, 155 to call Turkish National Police and 156 to call Jandarma. If you don't have these numbers programmed into your cell phone, do it today!

Force Protection

Recently someone observed a cleaning crew at a hotel in Kizkalesi searching through guests' personal belongings. When staying in a hotel, take your valuables with you or lock them in a suitcase. As a precautionary measure, leave unnecessary credit and identification cards at home when you travel. If you become a victim of theft — especially something like a gate pass or ID card—report it immediately to the LE desk at 6-3200.

Unit Compliance Inspection. What is it? Why should we want to do well? How can we do well? These are good questions because Incirlik's UCI is scheduled for Oct. 17 to 26.

UCIs measure a unit's compliance with Air Force regulations. If a regulation says we should be doing something, we should be doing it and have documentation to prove it.

There are philosophical and practical reasons to do well on a UCI. Philosophically, a UCI is like taking your perfectly running car to the mechanic for a check up. Maybe the mechanic won't find anything wrong or maybe he'll find a fan belt that is about to break and leave you stranded.

Without an occasional UCI, the Air Force would start to drift further and further from Air Force standards.

On any given day, Incirlik should basically be in compliance with regulations but preparing for a UCI takes it to a higher level and makes sure all units are in full compliance.

We should want to do well on the UCI because excellence in all we do is a core value of the Air Force.

Speaking practically, UCIs also help your career. Do you want a STEP promotion, below the zone promotion to senior airman, a "5" EPR or a good OPR, promotion to senior or chief, an award, more responsibility, a special duty assignment, an extension, the respect of others or the self-pride that comes from knowing your job? Do you want a goal day? Acing the UCI can help you accomplish these goals.

What are the consequences of failure on the UCI? Of course, Incirlik will have let the Air Force down. Instead of moving on to our next task, such as supporting the aircraft that launch here every day for the Global War on Terrorism or enjoying a burger burn and goal day, we will be spending our time fixing our errors. Worst of all, our self-pride and selfconfidence will be shaken, and we won't perform well in the future.

How can we prepare for the UCI? It's easy.

Step 1. Go to https://wwwmil.usafe.af.mil/direct/ig/index.html, click on "Guides" and print out the checklist for your area of responsibility. Run the checklist, make sure you are in compliance and have documentation to prove it. If there is no checklist for your area of responsibility, call your functional leadership at U.S. Air Forces in Europe and find out if a checklist exists but is not on the Web.

Step 2. Have your squadron self-inspection monitor get your results from the last

Turkish antiques defined

Question: Mehmet, what is considered an antique in Turkey, and how can I find out if something is an antique or not?

Response: I wish I had an easy answer to that question. To try to get a good answer, I went to the Adana Archeological Museum and asked officials the same question.

Since we're in a country like Turkey, which has more than 10 thousand years of history and more than 30 civilizations, there are no easy answers. Every civilization from Urartus to Hittites, Trojans to Lydyans, Romans to Byzantines and Seljucks to Ottomans left behind historic and antique objects.

Wherever you go in Turkey you can see an old castle or historical site. Turkey is considered to be the largest open air museum in the world. In addition to historic sites, we also have many Biblical sites located in various places throughout Turkey.

Since there are few experts, a very limited budget and countless historical sites to be excavated, many sites are left to nature's protection.

Due to the lack of proper protection and guardianship, thousands of antique pieces have been smuggled out of the country during the last century. Almost every museum in the western world has a section exhibiting items excavated in Turkey. Therefore, Turkey has imposed strict rules and heavy penalties against smuggling antique items.

It's hard to assign a date or age for an object to be considered antique. For instance, coins minted during the reigns of the last six sultans of the Ottoman Empire, from the mid 19th century until the beginning of the 20th century, are not considered antique. However, they have historical value.

On the other hand, a 200-year-old carpet with specials designs could be considered an antique, while clay pots dating back two thousand years might not. Only official experts can determine if a piece is antique or not. Meanwhile, some pieces have ethnographic value although they are only several hundred years old. Those pieces are mostly household items and cannot be taken out of the country either.

You might easily see old, antique-looking objects in shop windows in Adana or other cities in Turkey. Some old pieces, without antique value, can be sold in Turkey. Yet, those pieces are not allowed to be taken out of Turkey.

When you visit an ancient site or castle, you might see antique or historical objects lying around without any protection and that might give you the impression you can take them. But you should never pick up these items.

While visiting historical sites, very often local villagers or children will approach you and offer to sell you antique pieces or coins claiming they found them in their fields. Most of these old pieces and coins are mostly fake and you should never purchase these items.

According to law number 3386, Article 32, cultural and natural assets should be protected at home and not be taken abroad. People who act in contradiction of that law may go to jail for five to 10 years and receive a heavy fine. Additionally, the cultural asset is confiscated and delivered to a museum.

Anybody, Turkish or non-Turkish, who owns or finds fixed or movable cultural assets are obliged to inform the closest museum directorate. Museum officials will examine the piece. If it is an antique piece, the museum will purchase it. If it is not antique and has no value, a report will be prepared stating that.

Adana Archeological Museum houses about 108,000 pieces dating from 5,000 B.C. to present times. It features marble, bronze, copper and limestone artifacts, including a large collection of busts, tombstones and coins. The museum is located off of the E-5 at the corner of the intersection after crossing the river and next to the grand mosque.

Adana Ethnographic Museum reflects the lifestyles and cultures of the late Ottoman era (mostly 18th and 19th century pieces). The museum has a collection of nomad tents, carpets, kilims, camel and horse saddles, religious and cult paraphernalia, jewelry and ormaments. The museum is located in Old Adana close to Little Clock Square.

UCI at Incirlik and from Spangdahlem's (Air Base, Germany) March 2004 inspection. Make sure any problems identified in the two reports don't exist in your work area.

Step 3. Call your equivalent at Spangdahlem AB and get his or her impression of what the inspectors were looking for.

Step 4. Print out the regulations and instructions that govern your area, sit down with a highlighter and read the regulations page by page. If you find something you're not doing, highlight it, check it out, fix it, and then put a check mark next to it.

Step 5. Prepare to guide the inspectors through the checklist when they visit and be ready to show them your work area is in compliance.

If each of us starts doing these basic things now, we will work our way to the inspection without having to work long hours or weekends, and Incirlik will have a fantastically successful inspection. Incirlik Pride — show it in the UCI.

(Above) Staff Sgt. Ignacio Castro-Luna, 39th Air Base Wing safety specialist, shows Rania Nada the effects of alcohol by letting her wear goggles that simulate a .17 to .20 blood alcohol content level. Several prevention topics were discussed to highlight the 101 Critical Days of Summer during a safety fair held June 18 at the base exchange. (Left) Senior Airman Yasmine Red, 39th Security Forces Squadron pass and registration clerk, demonstrates how to properly lock a bicycle to prevent theft. The safety office suggests base people keep a few things in mind to prevent bicycle mishaps: wear a helmet, keep current on maintenance, check brakes prior to riding, be aware of surroundings, scan for obstacles and traffic, ride in the same direction of vehicle traffic and obey traffic rules.
